

d9eoead banned

FP has banned d9eoead after the incident where d9 posted an uncensored pornographic image to the server. Initially, FP had only taken the User role away from d9, though many criticized this move. In the late evening UTC of April 5, Andrei again remarked how the moderation issue was growing stronger and that FP was on his own, an incompetent admin. Eventually, the pressure proved too much and FP finally laid down the banhammer. With the banhammer down, the man who had fought a wiki war with Lemuria over AOP-1044, criticized Nora Elise Proctor, and was just starting the process of dating Gabi from Multiplayer Piano, was now gone. FP initially described the role removal as a "watered-down punishment", saying that since he never really got to see the images himself, he only took d9's User role away. Other members of the community

The community celebrated, while Lemuria posted the cover of the Alaska-born Emily Anderson's Salt & Water to spite d9, who frequently criticized Lemuria for posting Anderson.

As for d9's relationship with Gabi, OWON journalists do not plan to reach out to Gabi via DMs and intend on allowing the relationship to continue without interference. Or are we?

Porn d9 posted was Cyn from Murder Drones

By LEMURIA

An independent OWON investigation has revealed the pornographic art posted by d9 that resulted in his ban to be Rule 34 art of a Murder Drones character, named Cyn.

Murder Drones is a web series by Liam Vickers, available on the GLITCH YouTube chanel.

Working off a screenshot that censored the explicit portion of the offending image, the character's head was run through Google Lens, an image-based search engine.

The original image was created by a digital artist known only as Papitasma around late March 2024.

Comments on a rule 34 site that OWON visited as part of the investigation show comments dating back to March 30, 2024.

One of them even praised the artist for their "very impressive speed", pointing out how it was only drawn 23 hours after the release of Episode 7, "Mass Destruction".

Papitasma has no social media presences with the original image, and OWON is choosing not to contact them.

With the image now tracked down and curiosity satisfied, OWON will certainly be ordering some amnestics off Amazon and hiring some therapists for its now-traumatized team.

D9 still in OWOT chat

By LEMURIA

The now-disgraced d9eoead remains active in OWOT's chat. He insulted MothCultLeader, continued to speak of "big-breasted women", and engaged in all manner of bad chat behavior.

Lemuria calls for FP to take action against d9 not only on Discord but on the canvas too, by permanently revoking his access to chat and the canvas.

It is only a matter of time before d9eoead does something just as retarded as the Papitasma porn image, such as pasting it on the canvas, or in general being an annoyance for the entire chat to deal with.

d9eoead urgently needs to go outside and touch some grass. And while outside, contemplate why he decided to post a Murder Drones rule 34 image to a Discord server for some random website on the internet.

Anderson prevails in D9's absence

By LEMURIA

In d9eoead's absence, Lemuria took the opportunity to post an image of the album cover of Emily Anderson's album Salt & Water.

Lemuria is now free to do so without worrying about d9.

For the unfamiliar, Emily Anderson is an Alaskan singer-songwriter who now lives in Los Angeles. Her music popped up in Lemuria's YouTube recommendations one day, and he has since grown to like her music.

One of her most recent single releases was "30th Birthday", a song he sent links to fairly often in the OWOT Discord once.

On d9's 30th birthday, he'll be thinking about his life, he'll thinking about the porn he posted, on his 30th birthday - he will still be banned.

Good riddance to d9. Imagine hating on indie musicians and trashing on the music they worked hard to produce for no good reason other than pure hatred, spite, excessive judgementality, and ignorance.

Freshly pulverized by the hammer d9eoead's ban is only yet another entry on OWOT's rolls of shame as FP begins to take action against the community's most disliked.

By LEMURIA

Here are a list of the previous few bans that OWON has observed, in backwards chronological order.

Ziggy, for drawing stick figure child pornography.

Scar17off, for using artificial intelligence text-to-image models to generate depictions of beastiality.

Sabrina (who now goes by Starianna), for spamming OWOT and running the counting bots in early January 2024.

N-word spam in chat

An unknown person is using bots to spam messages about N-words tonguing A-words. Honestly, we're jaded at this point. All this spam is gonna make Lemuria run out of hard drive space.

Apr. 5 issue encounters Archive.org error

By LEMURIA

April 5's Our World of News is unavailable on Archive.org. This was due to an error in uploading, which Lemuria attempted to fix by taking the item offline.

He is currently attempting to resolve the issue with the Internet Archive and has asked for help on the forums. With the post being made on Saturday, a reply will likely not arrive until Monday, temporarily rendering the issue unavailable.

Lemuria retains a copy on his hard drive and the issue PDF is still downloadable in OWON's Discord thread for all to read and enjoy.

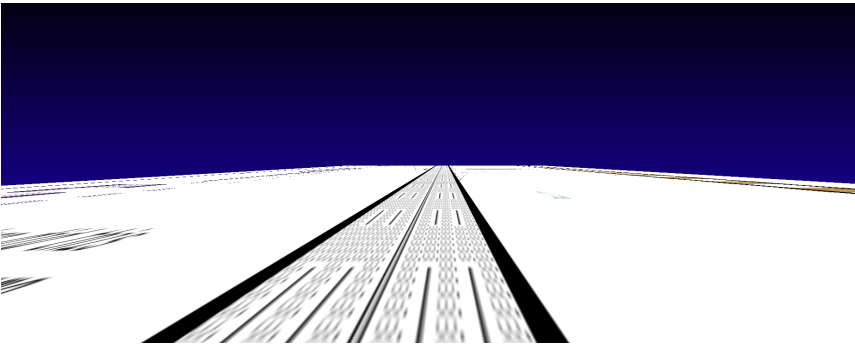

Mr. 1052's Headache3d will disorient you

By LEMURIA

Mr. 1052 has created something new for OWOT, Headache3d.

Headache3d turns OWOT into a 2d canvas that you stand upon. The sky is beautiful and it appears there is no horizon given that OWOT is a flat surface after all.

It offers all sorts of fun on the canvas, such as allowing you to get in a "car" and feel like you're driving on a road to somewhere.

Though you quickly get used to it and you don't really feel that severe of a headache anymore.

Overall, it is neat and joins Mr. 1052's long series of experiments, whether it's ragdolls, October Ember cake, or perhaps something more. OWON will await Mr. 1052's next project with some excitement.

It's a tree, what else do you want?

OWON in the dark about Gabi

By LEMURIA

Now with d9 out of the Discord server and a fresh round of hostilities between Lemuria and d9 over Anderson, OWON journalists are once again in the dark.

Gabi, the girl d9 has been rizzing up these past few days, continues to be unreachable.

While OWON has no plans to contact her, investigations took us to the Multiplayer Piano Discord server where we found neither d9eoad or Gabi.

Though we have no evidence, some vigilantes may or may not be taking it upon themselves to inform Gabi of what her date did in the Discord server of OWOT, particularly the posting of a Murder Drones Rule 34 image by unknown digital artist Papitasma.

OWON will continue to observe the relationship to the best of its abilities, though we cannot guarantee that d9 will keep anyone updated.

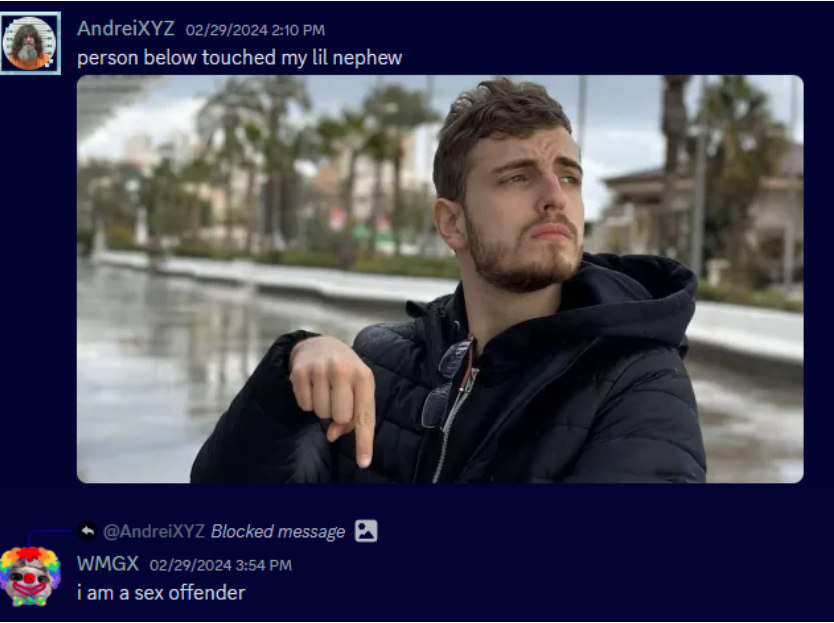

In fact, if d9 knows anyone's trying to reach out to Gabi, he might be paranoid.

FFDR reaches 500 episodes of Life in The Woods

By LEMURIA

Falling For Dead Roses, the underrated German gaming YouTuber that this paper has had a penchant for covering, has finally reached a whole five hundred episodes of her Minecraft Let's Play series.

Her series, Life in The Woods, centered on the mod-pack by Phedran of the same name, first began on December 13, 2020.

Since then, she has put out episodes almost every single day for the past three/four years.

FFDR's Episode 500 is a whopping 42 minutes, above the usual 20-30 minute length of other episodes. She does an "overview episode" every 100 episodes, where she summarizes the events of the past 100 episodes.

While OWON was starved for time and couldn't watch the entire 42-minute episode or summarize it, one aspect we did pick up on in the episode, was that she visited her "Doggo Fun Cave", where she keeps all her dogs in a loving area where they feel most comfortable.

Even with 500 episodes, FFDR continues to march on. She has already published episode 501 and OWON wishes her good luck on the next 500 episodes.

Who knew YouTube's recommendation algorithm could bring such underrated hidden gems to light? How is she still this obscure? Her videos are so relaxing!
